

Kelly's Conservation Forest grows with thousands more trees planted

24 September 2019

Lindy Kelly, right, with volunteer Val Latimer planting trees at Kelly's Conservation Forest in Enner Glynn earlier this year.

NZ First MP and Forestry Minister Shane Jones visited the forest in July and announced it would be receiving 5000 native trees for the second year in a row through the organisation Trees That Count.

Kelly said open days were held throughout the year to allow people to enjoy the environment. There were a number of new walking trails, bridges and seats for people to enjoy.

"It's wonderful, the whole family really enjoys it, they love seeing the enthusiastic people through."

She received great feedback from those who visited, grateful there was a sanctuary so close to the city for them to visit at no cost.

The next open day at the forest would be held on September 29 from 1-4pm. Free entry. Donations welcome. 100 Enner Glynn Rd, Nelson.

Figure 1NZ First MP Shane Jones with Lindy Kelly, of Kelly's Conservation Forest in Enner Glynn. Volunteers have helped to plant almost 10,000 trees on the farm this year.

There will be drinks and refreshments, plants and other items on sale plus a tent where children's activities will be run by environmental educator Mel Willmott.

Source:<https://www.stuff.co.nz/nelson-mail/news/115939488/kellys-conservation-forest-grows-with-thousands-more-trees-planted>