

IFS officers to attend training programme

Nov 24, 2018

Twenty Indian Forest Service (IFS) officers from across the country will attend a five-day training programme at the Institute of Forest Genetics and Tree Breeding (IFGTB) here from Tuesday. The programme will focus on forest genetic resource management and conservation. The officers will be given insight into the global and national scenario on conservation of forest genetic resources, economic gains from forest genetic resources, plant reproduction for conservation of forest genetic resources and how forest genetic resources are vulnerable to the changing climate.TNN
