

Thane Creek Flamingo Sanctuary gets Ramsar tag

28 December 2022

The Thane Creek Flamingo Sanctuary (TCFS) has been given the status of a Ramsar site by the International Wetlands Convention. Jonathan Barzdo, secretary general of Convention on Wetlands, has issued a certificate to this effect

Thane, India - January 30, 2019: On the occasion of wetlands day on February 2, Paryavaran Dakshata Manch on Wednesday organised a creek safari to create awareness about the wetlands in Thane. Around 15 environment enthusiasts were a part of the safari that went until Airloli. They also visited the Flamingo sanctuary and the Mangrove center situated there. Enroute they spotted a variety of birds, this included flamingo and rare mangroves as well. As the Airoli end of the creek is shallow, more than 200 varieties of winter birds that migrate from European countries can be spotted here, India, Wednesday, January 30, 2019. (Photo by Praful Gangurde/ HT Photo) (HT PHOTO)

Source: <https://www.hindustantimes.com/cities/mumbai-news/thane-creek-flamingo-sanctuary-gets-ramsar-tag-101672170644562.html>